

BRADFORD GRAMMAR SCHOOL

Head of Bradford Grammar School

Kevin Riley is the new Head of Bradford Grammar School. He succeeds Stephen Davidson who retired in December 2011.

Mr Riley, who was the Head of Harrow International School in Bangkok, has a distinguished career having previously been Head at both Bristol Cathedral School and The John Lyon School, part of the Harrow Foundation. He has also taught at Wolverhampton Grammar School and began his teaching at Pocklington School. An English graduate, he studied at the Universities of Aberystwyth, Birmingham, Bristol and Warwick.

He brings a wealth of experience to the position, including serving as a governor of a number of schools during his career.

An active member of HMC, he has also been involved in charity work, notably as Chairman and founder of the Bujagali Trust which supports education in Uganda.

Mr Riley is married to Elspeth and has three sons.

Kevin Riley said:

“I am thrilled to be the Head of Bradford Grammar School. It is a school that has an enviable reputation and I want to build on the tremendous work of the former Head, Stephen Davidson. The school’s mission opens with the commitment to ensure that pupils should be ‘happy, valued and can flourish’. I can think of no more worthy vision and it will be a privilege to work with governors, staff, pupils and families to that end so that BGS is the leading independent co-educational day school in the country.’